

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF ISLAMABAD

ACCA

THE COLLEGE

In today's world, high academic achievement is very important. Many people in Pakistan are dissatisfied with the standard of undergraduate education available to them and would prefer to follow a more rigorous British-type curriculum. The University College of Islamabad (UCI) aims to provide an educational programme which combines the best that can be offered: academic guidance from the Association of Chartered Certified Accountants (ACCA), a range of subjects, individual attention from local teachers and a good College environment conducive to learning. UCI has the status of a Registered (UCRS) institution with ACCA since 2001.

The College has been offering a range of courses including University of London LLB and BSc since 1992. UCI has decided that the ACCA Programme will complement the other courses offered at the college.

ACCA

ACCA is the Association of Chartered and Certified Accountants. This organization provides a framework of qualifications that can lead to Chartered Accountancy. After Part II of the examinations, students are eligible for obtaining a BSc (Hons.) in Applied Accounting from Oxford Brookes University.

Accountants are required in most businesses; personnel with knowledge and understanding of financial systems are an essential element of any organization. It is also important to have credentials of an international reputation so that the person can be employed the world over. The ACCA courses have all these requisites and it is a qualification that will make you a part of today's global business environment.
